

Five Key Questions to Help Determine the State of Customer Experience for Your Business

HorizonCX now offers a quick and inexpensive VOC solution that will provide you with immediate feedback on the state of customer experience (CX) for your business—whether you are a B2B or B2C organization—based on the following five key elements.

1. If asked, how likely would your customers be to recommend your business to others?
2. Why specifically would they or why would they not recommend you?
3. How strong is the relationship between your customers and their primary contact?
4. How does your business measure up (re: products and or services) to your competition?
5. Why did your customers choose you and why do they continue to do business with you?

The answers to these five key questions will uncover insights to help you determine which internal processes require attention and what actions on your part might be necessary to help retain existing valued customers, acquire new business, and improve business objectives and results.

CX-555

- A short five question survey
- Up to five hundred of your customers
- A five-page comprehensive report

It's called the CX-555—a short five question survey targeted at up to five hundred of your customers with overall results analyzed and insights compiled within a comprehensive five-page report.

All this and more for just $500.

Your only requirement is to provide us with a clean contact list of up to 500 of your customers—with a minimum of first name, last name, and email address. If your customer-base is large, you can select a subset of customers, perhaps from one business segment or from one geographical location. There's no better or quicker way for you to get a handle on your customer's experiences with your business than through the CX-555. Within six weeks from start to finish, you will have in-hand a narrative report containing both quantitative data and qualitative insights to share amongst colleagues and key stakeholders within your organization.

This brief CX engagement doesn't have to end here either—that's totally up to you. HorizonCX offers many more services aimed at generating interest and excitement around CX and bringing CX to life within your business. If you're looking for a quick assessment of the state of CX for your business, the CX-555 is right for you. Contact us today for brief consult along with additional details on how to get started.
